Interview with Ed Pearl, NAM member, owner of the Ash Grove

Victor Cohen: so you were saying about the [Socialist Community] School in L.A.?

Ed Pearl: Let me just say that by the time the school started, that was in the late 70s—I heard about the New American Movement in the early 70s. I ran a club here called the Ash Grove, and it was the center of the movement in the 60s, as well as traditional music, black and white, throughout the 60s. One of the people that I knew who actually did electrical work was Paul Rosenstein—he and Sharon Stricker were a part of the original founders of the New American Movement here in Los Angeles. Paul
